

Jane Lew, W.V.-based Composite Pools Hits The Small Screen

Courtesy TLC

A recent Moving Up episode on TLC featured a couple who had won the lottery and were struggling to conserve their $600,000 prize money while their ambitious renovations spiraled out of control. While the couple wanted a pool and hot tub, in the end, they could only pick one.

Courtesy DIY Network

On the DIY network's Inside Out, a North Carolina couple wanted to add a pool and pavilion to their house so they could enjoy the outdoors more. The end result: a backyard oasis featuring the pool, a stone patio and walkway, grilling station, flat-screen TV and more.

You Can Run, But You Can't Hide

Thieves try to hide in plain sight

When a Windsor, Ontario, police officer recently spotted a stolen Jeep, he did what he was trained to do: pursue the vehicle. Only these drivers were up for a chase. They narrowly missed colliding with another vehicle before crashing into a light pole and fleeing on foot.

While one suspect was "smart enough" to hide in a neighboring home's pool accessory storage box, the other thought he'd best be concealed soaking in a hot tub in nearby backyard.

Needless to say, they both were arrested and face charges of possession of stolen property, dangerous driving and resisting arrest.

Each year Olympic Hot Tub Company designs a poster to commemorate the company's anniversary. Happy 31st, Olympic!